PELVIC FLOOR REHALBILITATION

Pelvic floor physical therapy is a specialty area within physical therapy focusing on the rehabilitation of muscles in the pelvic floor after injury or dysfunction.

The pelvis is the bony structure between the legs and spine. The pelvic floor is the group of muscles that form the bottom of the pelvis. A ligament is a strong band of tissue that holds your joints together or the place where two bones meet.

The pelvic floor muscles:

- Support the organs in the pelvis

- Help the body to start and stop urine and bowel movements

- Are used during sex

- Help with posture support and ligament stability

VIDEO LARYNGOSCOPE

Video laryngoscope is a new tracheal intubation device that can provide indirect view of the upper respiratory tract. In terms of difficult airway management and treatment, compared with direct laryngoscope, video laryngoscope can improve the Cormack-Lehane classification of glottis exposure and can achieve the same or higher tracheal intubation success rate in a shorter time.
